Foreword from a Hall of Famer

In my baseball career, I was fortunate to play third base on some truly talented Baltimore Oriole teams. I have fond memories of winning two World Series® Championship's® with some of the best teammates who have played the game. Sure, there were the personal achievements, MVP in 1970, 16 consecutive Gold Glove awards that eventually earned me the nickname "Vacuum Cleaner". I've been involved with baseball for a little over half a century now and I've witnessed the game of baseball evolve and progress tremendously. Major League Baseball® 2K7, the game that you currently have in your possession, is an example of one of those leaps forward in the game. Never before have I seen such a strong resemblance between real-life baseball and the simulations and real-life detail of Major League Baseball® 2K7. The player models are incredible! Signature Style truly brings out the most precise details of a player from the waggle in his stance to the pine tar level on his bat. Then there is the insightful commentary of Jon Miller and Joe Morgan. I could go on and on.

The dirt, the passion, and real-life baseball has been captured with Major League Baseball® 2K7. So get your glove, grab a bat, and pick your team. Let's play ball!

The Pastime

It may seem like an eternity since the Cardinals won the World Series last October, but the snow is melting and the cold, dark days of winter have just about released their grip on the ground. It won't be long now before the flowers spring forth and the unmistakable scent of freshly cut grass permeates the air. And that only means one thing—it's baseball season! By the time you read this, each of the 30 Major League Baseball® teams will be toiling away at Spring Training, each of them working to field the best team they can this coming season. So put away that football jersey, oil up the old leather glove, and cross your fingers in hopes that this is the year for your team. After all, stadium hot dogs always taste better in October!

That being said, October is a long way off and the 162-game baseball season is every bit the marathon the managers and ball players say it is. So why not help pass the time by taking matters into your own hands? No, we're not suggesting you head down to Arizona or Florida and try out for your favorite team. Instead, try popping in a copy of Major League Baseball® 2K7 and take to your very own virtual field of dreams. Play against a friend in an exhibition game; head online and join a league; or take the reigns as the GM of your favorite franchise and prove once and for all that you know how to build a winner. Major League Baseball® 2K7 enables you to do all of this and more. It is every bit an entertaining pick-up-and-play game as it is a sophisticated sports simulator. In short, it's been built to give you, the gamer, what you want no matter what you're looking for.

About This Guide

We at BradyGames know that there is no one correct way to play a sports game such as Major League Baseball® 2K7. We can appreciate the fact that some gamers will be perfectly content playing exhibition games with friends and maybe an abbreviated season or two. We also know that there are those who will continue tweaking the rosters, player ratings, and in-game slider controls until a simulated season yields a nearly identical match to last year's final statistics. Our goal in creating this guidebook is to create something that both types of player—and everyone in-between—will find useful.

This starts with the rosters. Inside you will find a listing of every major league team's roster, the player's complete ratings list and 2006 stats, as well as recommended lineups, pitching rotations and bullpen heirarchy. This gives you a chance to compare player ratings and stats even when you're away from your game. Our next goal with this book was to expand on the user's manual. While the rules of baseball appear very simple on the surface, there are complexities that lurk beneath the surface, especially as they relate to a videogame controller. Between the "Spring Training" and "Advanced Baseball Tactics" chapters, we're confident that even newcomers to the series will be swinging for the fences in no time. Lastly, we have included a detailed guide to unlocking each of the Achievements in the Xbox 360 version of the game. It's our hope that you find this strategy guide a valuable resource throughout the coming season. And may this be the year for your team!

Good luck!

SPRING TRAINING

Welcome to Spring Training! Whether you're an aging veteran or hoping to snag a spot on the bench as a rookie, this chapter is sure to help you work out the kinks from the off-season. In this section we'll go over the controls and the various gameplay modes, as well as the numerous options and customization sliders that exist. We'll even throw in just enough tips and tactics to make you dangerous. Read through the chapter, play a couple games, and then move on to the 'Advanced Baseball Tactics' section of this book when you're ready to really dig in and get dirty.

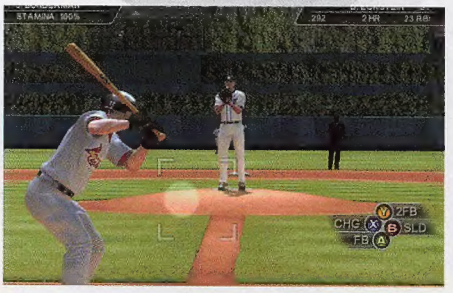
BASEBALL FUNDAMENTALS

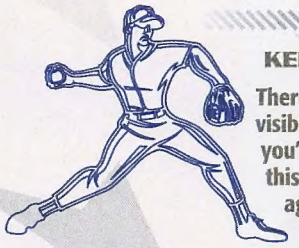
Batting, Pre-Pitch

There are several things to consider prior to a pitch being thrown. Since the controls will vary per platform, just the list is shown below:

- Move Batter's Eye
- Sacrifice bunt
- Increase all leadoffs
- Decrease all leadoffs
- Enter Baseburner mode
- Steal a base
- View Lineup Card
- Batter's Eye

The Batter's Eye is a feature that enables the batter to focus his attention on a particular spot within the strike zone. When displayed, the Batter's Eye appears as a semi-transparent white circle—the size of this circle depends on the batter's abilities versus that of the pitcher. Click the appropriate button to display the Batter's Eye and position the Batter's Eye to where you think the pitcher is going to throw the ball. You can continue to move the Batter's Eye until the pitcher begins his windup. If you decide not to move it or release the button before the pitcher begins his throw, the Batter's Eye will snap back to the center of the strike zone.

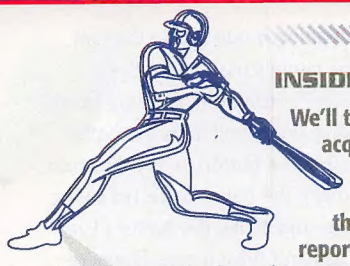




KEEP IT HIDDEN!

There is an option to make the Batter's Eye visible at all times, which is great when you're playing alone or online, but turn off this feature when playing head-to-head against a friend on the same television. After all, you don't want to broadcast to the pitcher where you're looking for the pitch!

A colored circle will appear near the Batter's Eye marker if you guessed the correct location of the pitch, thus indicating exactly where the pitch is going. Not only does this indicate the location of the pitch, but the batter also gains a small boost to his hitting ratings for guessing correctly. Depending on the size of the Batter's Eye (which always changes throughout the game) if you don't see the colored circle appear, you may want to lay off the pitch. If the Batter's Eye is large and you guessed incorrectly, it could very well mean that the pitch is outside the strike zone entirely. Take the pitch.

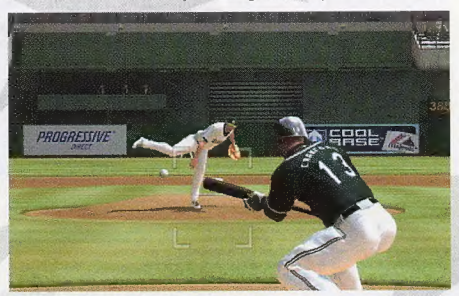


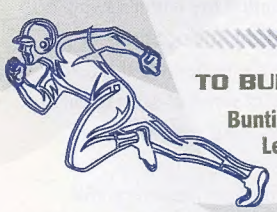
INSIDE EDGE

We'll talk about the importance of acquiring the Inside Edge scouting reports in the next chapter, but bear in mind that when you own the opposing pitcher's scouting report, you will see the three locations that he's most likely to throw to. Make sure you cover those areas with your Batter's Eye!

SACRIFICE BUNTING

What makes a sacrifice bunt special is that the batter squares up to bunt before the pitcher begins his windup. Everyone in the ballpark knows the batter's intention—to move another baserunner into better scoring position—so the pressure is on the defense to not let it happen. Once the player is in the bunting position, use the appropriate buttons to direct the bunt up the third or first base lines, respectively. The direction in which you bunt the ball depends on where the other baserunner is and how the defense is playing. In a typical situation with a runner on first base, it is wise to bunt the ball down the third base line, thereby hitting it away from both the batter and the baserunner. It's rare that both runners are safe during a sacrifice bunt, but you must avoid bunting into a double play!





TO BUNT OR NOT TO BUNT

Bunting is a bit of a lost art in today's Major League Baseball®, especially in the American League. There simply aren't that many guys who excel at bunting or who have the blazing speed necessary to beat the throw to first base. Before you try laying down a sac bunt, check your team's lineup and their various batting ratings. Consider limiting your bunting to players with a Bunt rating above 70.

LEADING OFF

Use the appropriate button to control the lead that your baserunners take before the pitch. A press of one button makes the runners take a lead, while pressing another button makes them retreat toward the bag. Although the players will automatically dive back toward the base if the pitcher attempts a pickoff, this could prove futile if the player has too large of a lead. We recommend that you allow the baserunners to take a normal lead unless you plan to steal.

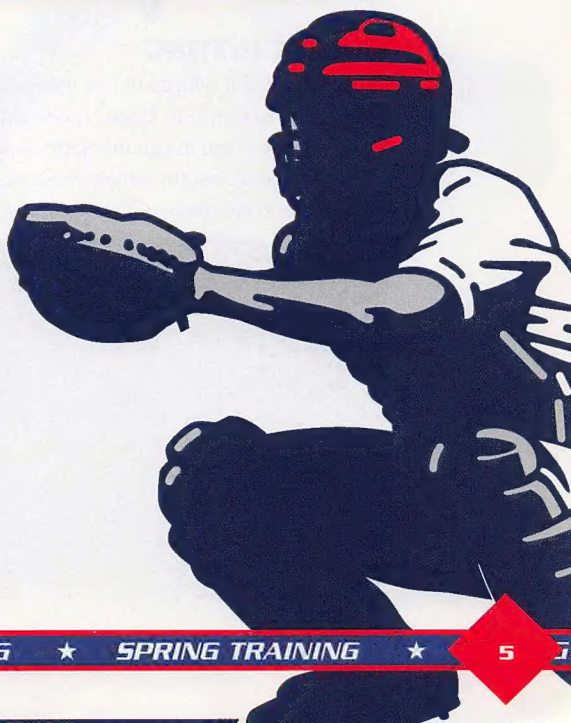
If you do have a speedy baserunner and wish to steal, have the player take a good lead and then wait for the pitcher to begin his approach. The instant he initiates his delivery, press the Steal button while pointing toward the base you want to steal.

A TIME TO STEAL

There are a few players who can be counted on stealing a base nearly every time they get to first. Guys like Juan Pierre, Scott Podsednik, Ichiro, and Jose Reyes love nothing more than to put their speed to use and make their way down to second base. Although these guys have the green light to steal whenever they want, it's important to take a closer look at the situation. Is the pitcher a lefty? If so, he's staring straight at first base during his pre-pitch moments and can see what you're up to. Do you have a power hitter at the plate? If so, let the man do his job and drive in the baserunner. Is the baserunner fast? Does the catcher have a strong arm? There's a lot to consider when trying to steal a base. We recommend that you limit your thievery to when your very fastest players are on base and you need to manufacture some runs (i.e. are lacking in power hitting).

BASEBURNER MODE

With Baseburner mode, it's possible to take direct control of the baserunner and, instead of giving orders to the baserunner, you can give them to the batter. Press the Baserunner button to enter Baseburner mode while controlling the batter. This will shift your control—and viewing perspective—to the baserunner. Continue to press that button to cycle through all baserunners and/or return to the batter.



Baseburner mode also enables you to give commands to the batter by using the Directional Pad. Press Up, Down, Left, or Right to instruct the batter regarding the next pitch. The options are as follows:

- DON'T SWING: If you have a really fast baserunner and don't want to risk the batter fouling off a pitch or, worse, hitting a routine pop up, then tell him not to swing and let the baserunner do it on his own. Obviously, you only want to tell the batter to take the pitch when there are only one or fewer strikes in the count.
- BE SELECTIVE: This command gives the batter the go-ahead to take a swing as long as it's a good pitch that he can perhaps hit behind the runner or in the opposite direction. While controlling the baserunner, you must be aware that he may lay off the pitch altogether or accidentally hit into a double play. There is some risk here.
- BUNT: Instructing the batter to bunt is akin to sacrifice bunting, but instead of controlling the batter, you control the runner. This is a good idea if the batter excels at bunting or if you simply want some help moving the runner over. As long as you get a good jump on the pitch, there is little chance of falling prey to a double play.
- SWING: This is a risky maneuver. Should the batter successfully drive the ball into the gap or hit behind the runner, there is a chance that the baserunner may gain an extra base. However, there is also the chance that the batter may hit a line drive to an infielder, thus resulting in an easy double play for the defense.

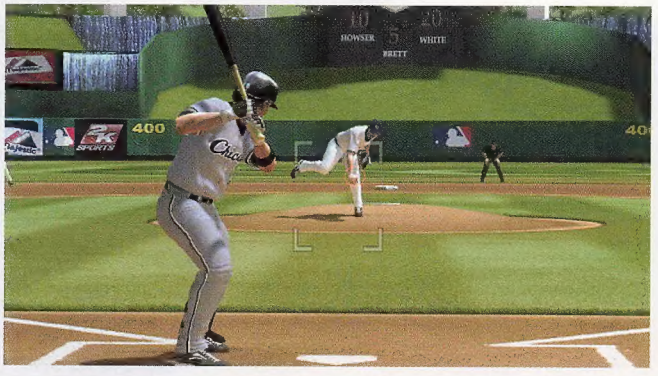
Batting, Classic Mode

There are several things to consider when batting in Classic Mode. Note that the controls for each system vary, so please refer to the game manual for the proper button controls.

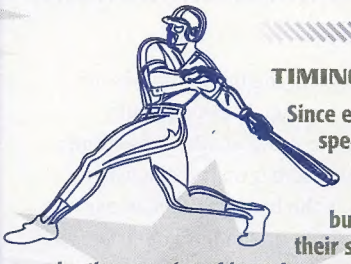
- Influence hit type
- Swing
- Steal
- Bunt

CLASSIC HITTING

Those who find it difficult to use the Swing Stick batting system are advised to switch to Classic mode within your profile settings. This will enable you to use the traditional swing mechanism. To bat using the Classic system, simply press the Swing button at the right moment to make the batter take a swing.



It is possible while using the Classic batting mode to use the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick (see the game's manual for the specific button) to influence the swing. For example, pressing Up will tend to yield fly balls, whereas pressing Down will have the batter hit ground balls and line drives. Pressing the button in any direction during the delivery of the pitch will make the batter focus his swing on a specific section of the strike zone—much like the Batter's Eye. This could help you hit through the ball and drive it exactly where you intend for it to go, but it can also cause the player to swing above or under the pitch.



TIMING IS EVERYTHING

Since every pitcher throws at a different speed, it's impossible to suggest a specific point in the delivery that you should press the swing button. Obviously, batters must start their swing sooner when facing a pitcher who throws a lot of heat, but watch out for a changeup. Consider playing a few exhibition games or spending some time in Home Run Derby mode before jumping online to get a feel for the timing. Also, try to refrain from doing too much with the ball via the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick until you gain a mastery of the timing.

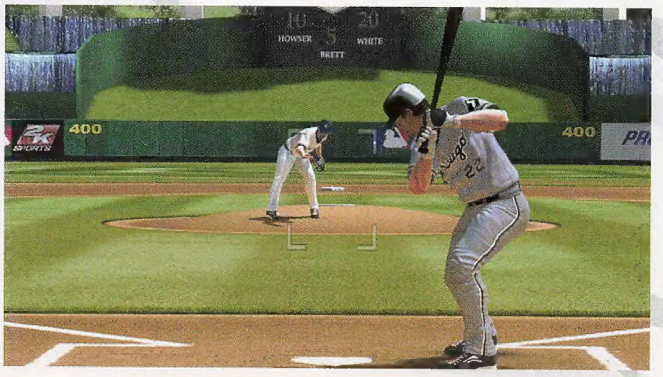
Batting, Swing Stick

There are two options available when using the swing stick. They are: Swing and Steal. Read on to learn about the intricacies of the Swing Stick.

SWING STICK HITTING

Instead of pressing the Swing button to swing the bat, Major League Baseball® 2K7 gives players the option to control the batter's swing with precision-control via the Right Thumbstick/Right Analog Stick (see the game's manual for the specific button). There's no denying this takes some practice, but there is also a very pleasant sense of satisfaction gained from driving in the winning run while using the Swing Stick.

To use the Swing Stick feature, the player must pull Down on the button as the pitcher releases the ball. This starts the batter's step and shifts his weight to his back leg, thus effectively loading the spring. With the step complete, it's time to unleash the energy by swinging. Release the Swing Stick button to make the batter step forward and swing. Allowing the button to snap back to its default position will yield a contact swing, which is good for base hits, but will not result in a long fly ball.



Another option is to push Up on the Swing Stick button after taking a step. Doing this results in a power swing and is necessary if you're looking to drive the ball over the outfield wall. Hitting for power with the Swing Stick is a lot more difficult than hitting for contact, but it can yield devastating results.

It's also possible to aim your hits while using the Swing Stick. After taking a step, move the Swing Stick button to the left or right in a semi-circular motion to hit the ball in either direction. This, of course, can be combined with pushing up for a power swing, so as to drive the ball deep to left or right field. This is a great way to hit a home run in an asymmetric field that has a shallow "porch" down one of the lines. Lastly, it's also possible to tap Up on the Swing Stick button at the last moment to make a defensive swing. This is useful for fouling off pitches that you intended to take.

Bunting

When it's time to move a runner into scoring position, there are several things to consider. They are:

- Moving the bat (during sacrifice)
- Aim Left
- Aim Right
- Enter bunt stance

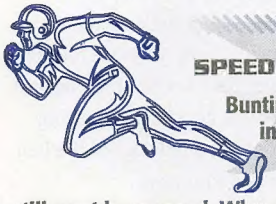
DRAG BUNTING

It's one thing to perform a sacrifice bunt to move over a runner, but it's another thing entirely to surprise the defense with a drag bunt in hopes of getting an infield hit. To do so, wait for the pitcher to begin his pitching motion, then quickly press the Bunt button to make the batter square up to bunt. Press and hold to the Left or Right to aim the ball down either the third or first base lines, respectively.



SPEED REQUIRED

Bunting for a base hit is best done when the infield is playing deep or, perhaps, shifted to the right or left. But even with these favorable conditions, the batter still must have speed. When drag bunting, what you are effectively trying to do is steal first base. So, again, this is the sole domain of the fleet of foot.

Look over your roster and see who has Bunt and Speed ratings in excess of 80 and resist the urge to use anyone else for this task. Guys like Willy Taveras, Rafael Furcal, and the aforementioned Juan Pierre and Ichiro are ideal candidates for drag bunting. But keep in mind that a smart defensive manager may expect this tactic and play his infield in. If the third baseman and first baseman are playing shallow, back off and take a swing.

Pitching

Pitching isn't all about simply throwing the ball to the catcher. There are other intricacies to consider, including base runners, the count, and so on. Here are a few things to ponder while you're pitching:

- Aim the pitch breakpoint
- Move the catcher
- Consider a pickoff move
- View pitch breaks
- Throw the pitch
- View Lineup Card

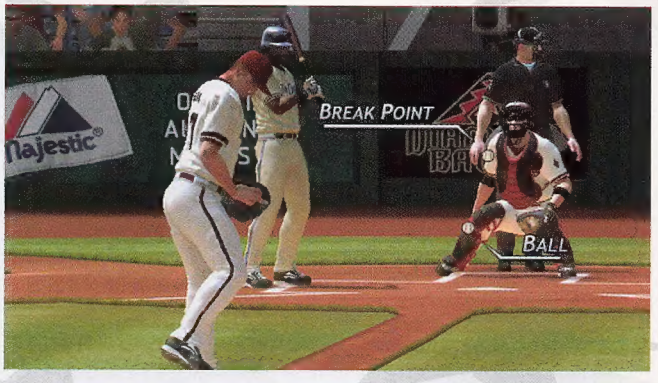
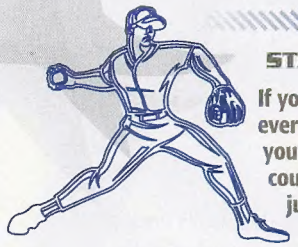
PITCH BREAKPOINTS

The first step in throwing a pitch is setting the pitch's breakpoint. Press the Pitch Breakpoint button to find out which direction each of the pitches break (not all pitches break), then use the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick (see the game's manual for the appropriate button) to position the cursor where you want to set the break point. Keep in mind that this is not where the pitch is going to cross the plate, but where it's going to break in the direction of the arrow. Once the cursor is where you want it, press and hold the corresponding pitch button. While holding the button, a large yellow circle known as the Effectiveness Ring will expand from the center of the cursor and the controller will begin to vibrate. The longer you hold the button, the more effort the pitcher will put into the pitch. This causes fastballs to travel faster, changeups to move slower, and breaking balls to break further.

When you're ready to throw the ball, release the button and watch as the Effectiveness Ring quickly snaps back toward the cursor. Tap the pitch button again when the brackets from the Effectiveness Ring reach the cursor to set the pitch's accuracy. A perfect pitch will yield a small white burst and result in a pitch that breaks exactly from where you set the break point. Tapping the button a second time too early or too late will cause the pitch to deviate from the breakpoint you set. Missing the second button tap entirely will result in either a wild pitch or what is known as a "meat" pitch. In the case of the latter, the location of the ball will be immediately visible to the batter—expect to see it fly over the fence!

If the pitch break indicator is turned on in the options menu, you will see a pair of markers after each pitch that indicates how much the pitch broke from the targeted breakpoint. Use this feature together with different effort levels to see how much certain pitches break for each pitcher.





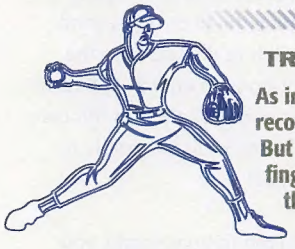
STAMINA MANAGEMENT

If you watch baseball on television or have ever been to a major league ballpark, then you've likely seen or heard about pitch counts. Most starting pitchers have enough juice to throw about 100 pitches, give or take a few. There is no pitch count per se in Major League Baseball® 2K7, but there is a stamina meter and the more effort you make your pitcher put into each pitch, the quicker this stamina meter drains.

Because of this, it's important to use your starting pitcher wisely and not put too much effort into every pitch. Don't try to maximize the Effectiveness Ring on every pitch, as it will only tire the pitcher out faster and force you to call on the bullpen earlier than is desirable. On the other hand, good hitters can crush weak pitching! Mix up hard and soft pitching throughout each batter's appearance to keep him guessing. As a rule of thumb, you can usually sneak in a weaker pitch on the first pitch or when the pitcher is behind in the count (more balls than strikes).

PITCH INFO

There is a lot of available information about your pitcher at your fingertips. All you have to do to access it is pull and hold the Pitch Info button. Doing this lets you see the direction of each pitch's break, but holding the Pitch Info button while pulling Down on the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick (see the game's manual for the specific button for each platform) lets you see the pitcher's ratings for each of his pitch types. These ratings are on a scale of 1 to 100, but can exceed 100 if you complete enough Payoff Pitches. Additionally, holding the Pitch Info button and pushing Up on the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick will display the frequency at which you've thrown each pitch type so far that game.



TRUSTING THE CATCHER

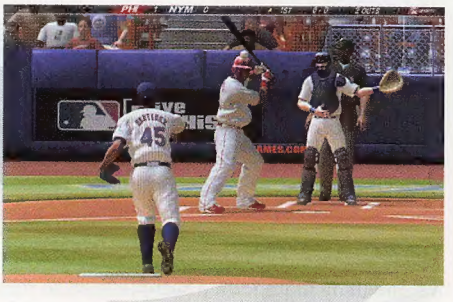
As in real baseball, the catcher will recommend a specific pitch and location. But rather than trying to see how many fingers he's holding between his legs, the pitch he recommends will appear outlined in blue. You can "shake off" his recommendation or throw the desired pitch per his request, but don't just throw a different pitch as it may cross him up and result in a passed ball.

Special Pitching Commands

There are several other options to consider when pitching. They are: Pitching Out, Intentional Walk, or "Special Pitches."

INTENTIONAL WALKS AND PITCH OUTS

Baseball is a game of strategy and sometimes the correct course of action is to intentionally walk a batter. For example, if you're leading by one run late in the game and there's a man on second, one out, and the opposing team's clean-up hitter is due up you may want to intentionally walk him. Not only does this remove the threat of him hitting a two-run homerun to take the lead, but it also adds the possibility of the next batter grounding into a double play. After all, there aren't too many big boppers out there who are lightning-fast on the base paths. To issue an intentional walk, simply pull and hold the Intentional Walk button and click the Right Thumbstick/Right Analog Stick. Note that you don't have to do this four times; doing it once will result in the batter being walked.



Similar in appearance to an intentional walk, the pitch out is useful when there is a base runner on first or second who is likely to attempt a steal. By throwing a pitch out of the strike zone, the catcher can spring to his feet and get an unobstructed throw off without having to worry about the batter hitting the ball. To throw a pitch out, pull and hold the Pitch Out button and click the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick. A pitch out does count as a ball, of course, but it is invaluable in throwing out a speedy base thief.

PICKOFF MOVES

Another weapon in the pitcher's arsenal is the pickoff move. By throwing the ball to the first baseman (or second baseman, if appropriate), you can effectively prevent the base runner from taking a large leadoff. A pitcher with a high pickoff rating can perform this maneuver both slyly and quickly and can oftentimes catch a baserunner leaning the wrong way. Not only is there a chance for the fielder to tag the base runner out as he dives back toward the bag, but there's also the chance that the baserunner will get caught breaking for second (or third). At this point, the fielder need only throw the ball to the next base and catch the baserunner in a run-down.

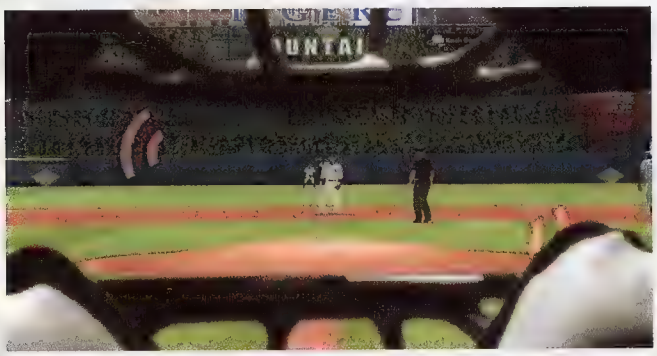
To perform a pickoff, pull and hold the Pickoff button before selecting a pitch type and press and hold the button that corresponds to the base you wish to throw to. Most of the time this will be first base, as attempting a pickoff at second base is a risky maneuver that shouldn't be attempted too often and there is seldom a reason to throw a pickoff to third base.

It's also possible to specify whether you want to make a safe, high toss just to get the baserunner back to the bag, or throw the ball lower to the ground in hopes of tagging him out. To do so, push Up or Down on the Left Thumbstick/Left Analog Stick while making the pickoff attempt to direct a higher or lower throw, respectively. A ball thrown low to the ground does have a greater probability of getting the baserunner out, but it's also more likely to result in an error.

SNAP THROWS

Snap throws are a great way to catch an unsuspecting baserunner off the base after a pitch. They are also useful for getting a quick throw down to second or third base to throw out a base stealer. If during the pitch delivery you notice that one of the base runners has broken for second or third, quickly press the corresponding button to make the catcher immediately throw the ball to that base after receiving the pitch. Of course, the batter may put the ball in play, but if he doesn't this is your last chance at preventing the steal. Similarly, throwing behind the baserunner may catch him off the bag.

Look for a message on the screen to indicate that a steal attempt is underway and press and hold the corresponding button to enter "Catcher Cam" mode. A series of red rings, much like the Effectiveness Ring, will appear when pitching. Hold the button until the rings have all rejoined one another in the center of the screen. Doing so will result in a more accurate throw, but the throw can be further affected by pushing Up or Down. You'll need to aim the throw and correct for where the catcher received the pitch except during a pitch out, as the location will already be optimal.



Baserunning

Baserunning can play a critical part in many games. Consider the following concepts:

- Sliding
- Advancing selected runner
- Retreating selected runner
- Advancing all runners
- Retreating all runners
- Selecting runner leaving home plate
- Selecting runner leaving first base
- Selecting runner leaving second base
- Selecting runner leaving third base

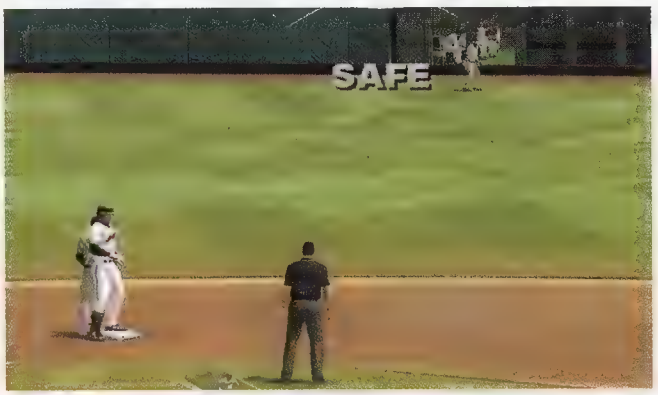
RUNNING THE BASE PATHS

Smart baserunning is one of the hallmarks of winning baseball. Knowing when to advance the runners and when to play things more conservatively will often spell the difference between winning and losing. Once the ball has been put into play by the batter, a semi-transparent baseball diamond will appear on the screen giving you a "picture-in-picture" view of your baserunners as they round the bases. You can issue commands to these baserunners in one of two ways. The easy way is to use the Baserunning buttons to tell them all simultaneously to either advance or retreat.

Although this works well for balls hit into the gaps or shots that bounce around in the corner, the situation will often call for specific orders for individual baserunners. Fortunately, the baserunners will automatically play things safe and will only advance automatically if there is little to no chance of them being thrown out. This leaves you to make the hard decisions and focus on the lead runner. Take control of an individual baserunner by pressing the button that corresponds to him (as seen on the overlay). Once selected, the baserunner's "PIP" will become outlined in blue. At this time you can issue orders to advance or retreat using the appropriate buttons, respectively. Each time you press the Baserunning button, the baserunner's intended destination will increase or decrease by one and the number of the base he's heading for will appear next to his PIP on the display.



HIT-AND-RUN

The ability to tap the Baserunning button twice and order a baserunner to advance two bases is especially helpful in hit-and-run situations. With a runner on first base, give the signal to make him steal second during the pitch delivery. While he's running, try to hit the ball behind him into shallow right field. If successful, select the runner who was on first and quickly tap the Baserunning button twice. This will tell him to advance to third while making sure that the batter stays put at first base.

SLIDE STICK

When controlling an individual baserunner, it's possible to precisely control the slide he makes going into a base. In fact, you can even cue up the slide before he gets to the bag to make sure you're not late!

Sliding is controlled by pressing the "Slide Stick" button. Pushing Up on the Slide Stick button will cue up a head first slide; pushing Up/Left will make the baserunner slide head first toward the inside of the bag; and pressing Up/Right will make him slide head first toward the outside of the base. Conversely, pushing Down, Down/Left, or Down/Right will make him slide feet first in those same directions as well.

The ability to slide toward the inside or outside of the base comes in handy when trying to escape a tag. Watch closely to see which direction the throw is coming from and try to slide away from the throw so as to make the fielder reach as far as possible in order to tag the baserunner. As a rule of thumb, slide to the inside of the base if the throw is coming from the outfield and to the outside of the base if the throw is coming from another infielder.

CATCHING FLY BALLS

When the ball is hit high into the air, a series of blue concentric rings will appear on the ground where the ball is going to land. Switch to the nearest fielder (if not automatically selected) and direct him to these rings. Once the fielder is in position to catch the ball, the rings will change color from blue to red. Once in position, the camera will change to "Pop-Fly" mode and you may need to make small adjustments to the fielder's glove positioning.

SPRINTING & ROBBING HOME RUNS

Outfielders—especially center fielders—need to possess tremendous speed in order to cover large amounts of ground. When controlling a fielder, press and hold the Sprint button to make him sprint. You'll notice an appreciable increase in his speed, but don't overdo it as he can end up tiring out and running even slower than before.

When sprinting after a ball, watch for an icon to appear over the fielder's head. Quickly tap the button in the direction of the icon to make him jump or dive toward the ball. This isn't a guarantee that he'll catch the ball, but it's usually worth a try, especially with a good fielder. And as spectacular as a diving catch can be, nothing compares to climbing the wall and robbing a hitter of a home run. When chasing down a deeply hit fly ball, look for a red triangle to appear near the base of the wall. Rush toward it and press Up on the Right Thumbstick/Right Analog Stick when the icon appears to make the fielder leap up and snag the home run ball.

Fielding Without Ball

While in the field, make sure you know how to do the following things. As noted previously, please refer to the game manual for the appropriate buttons.

- Move fielder
- Jump/Dive
- Change fielder
- Sprint
- Call off other fielders

Fielding With Ball

When a fielder catches the ball, he has several options to consider depending on the scenario in the game. Some of those options are listed here. Please refer to the game manual for the specific button presses for each control.

- Move the fielder
- Auto-Throw
- Sprint
- Throw to relay man or cut-off throw
- Throw to home plate
- Throw to first base
- Throw to second base
- Throw to third base

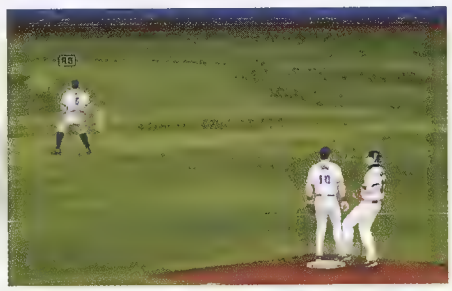
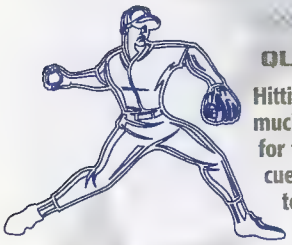
RELAYS AND CUT-OFF MEN

Experienced players know that with the exception of a few outfielders with cannons for arms—Vladimir Guerrero comes to mind—that it's usually wise to either throw directly to a relay man or cut the throw off with an infielder. Not only can baserunners advance on long throws that lose momentum, but the longer the throw is the less likely it is to be accurate. Instead of trying to throw from right field all the way to third base, press the Cutt-Off button to throw directly to a relay man.



If you don't hit the relay man, you can immediately call for a cut-off after throwing the ball into the infield. To do so, just press the Cut-Off button while the ball is in the air. This is especially helpful when you notice a baserunner getting greedy—hit the cut-off man and redirect the throw to a different base to make the out!



QUICK TRANSITIONS

Hitting the cut-off or relay man won't save much time if the fielder holds onto the ball for too long. Fortunately, it's possible to cue up the base you wish for him to throw to before he even catches it. Shortly after pressing the Cut-Off button to call for the cut-off, press and hold the button corresponding to the base you want to throw to. Doing so will make the cut-off or relay man quickly throw to that base the instant he catches the ball.

GAMEPLAY MODES

Play Ball

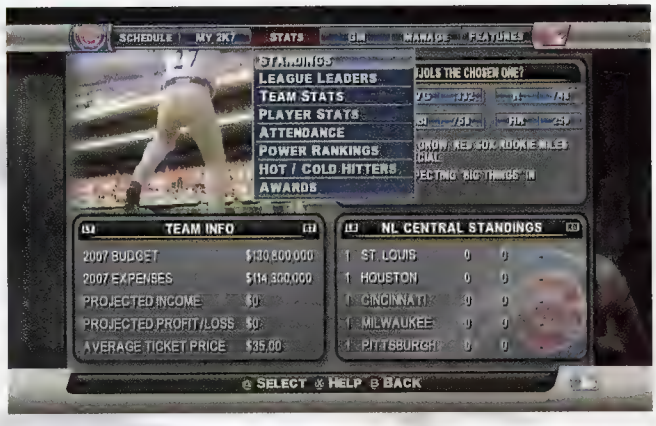
If you're looking to quickly jump into a game against the computer or a friend, choose Play Ball mode. This mode gets you into the action quickly—just pick a team, pick sides, and spend a moment spending the allotted 350 Edge Points to purchase the Inside Edge scouting reports on a couple of opposing players (see the "Advanced Baseball Tactics" chapter for more information on Inside Edge). You can also assign a V.I.P. profile to your opponent, which is a great way to practice against a friend's tendencies when he or she isn't around!

Exhibition

Exhibition mode is similar to Play Ball, but this mode has the added options to select any of the available team's uniforms, choose from any of the available ballparks, and even set the weather and time of day. Additional differences between Exhibition and Play Ball are that you can make adjustments to your starting lineup and even pick which pitcher you'd like to send out to the mound. Exhibition mode is perfect for when you simply want to play a quick game, but desire a little more customization than Play Ball mode allows, not to mention it's perfect for unlocking many of the Achievements available for Xbox 360!

Season

This is where the game starts to get a bit deeper. Here you have the chance to play a complete major league season. Not only can you enjoy the rigors of the full Major League Baseball® season, but you can customize it anyway you see fit. You can take control of up to four different teams, adjust the length of the season, institute a fantasy draft, set the playoff format, and even toggle on and off a number of options such as rain delays, injuries, and trades. The Season Setup screen has detailed explanations of what each of these options mean. Set it up per your desired level of realism and have at it!



After setting up the season options, you'll be taken to a management screen. This screen lists the current news from around the league and gives you a chance to inspect the standings and various team info. A new feature added to the game this year is the ability to quickly access a number of features via the navigation bar across the top of the screen.

SCHEDULE

Check the season schedule for any team in the league and for any month. This screen lets you scan ahead for likely pitching match-ups, to see which teams are cold or hot, and when rivals are due into town.

When you're ready to play (or simulate) a game, just access the Schedule and select the game you're interested in. You'll be given the chance to simulate all the games up to that date or to go back and play them. The choice is yours.

MY 2K7

This drop-down menu gives you the chance to access your VIP profile, Skybox, Settings, Challenges, and Cheats without exiting Season mode. This is a great new feature that puts all the information you can need about your overall Major League Baseball® 2K7 experience at your fingertips without having to exit Season mode. It's also where you go to save and load your data and make changes to your Season settings.

STATS

Information is everything during a pennant run and this tab gives you access to the current standings, individual and team statistics, attendance ratings, power rankings, and even a list of players in the midst of hot and cold streaks. It also lets you see any and all awards that have been handed out. Baseball is very much a statistics-driven game and this menu assortment lets you see exactly who is doing what around the league at any given time. Not only could this help you prepare for an upcoming game, but it also shows you who you might want to consider acquiring in a trade.

GM

Although it isn't necessary to take on the role of General Manager when playing in Season mode, the option is there if you want it. The GM tab allows you to spend your team's profits on Inside Edge scouting reports, make trades, sign free agents, manage your minor league talent, and even set ticket prices and inspect the team's finances. Much of this information is covered in more detail in the "Front Office" chapter later in this book.

MANAGE

The Manger's job goes far beyond filling out a lineup card each afternoon and kicking Diamond Dust on the shoes of the umpires. In fact, much of the Manager's time is spent maintaining player morale and keeping the players focused on the task at hand. Part of keeping the players happy is based on juggling the depth charts and lineups and trying to get everyone as much playing time as possible. The other part is by addressing their individual concerns. Be sure to check the Team Pulse option to see how each individual player's morale is affecting their ratings. If it's not to your liking, consider addressing the player on an individual basis or, perhaps, having a team meeting. There's no telling how they'll react to whatever approach you take, but that's the reality of life as a big league skipper.

FEATURES

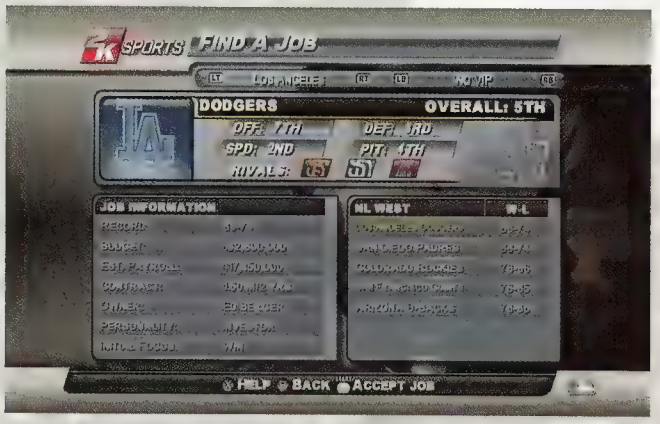
Want to add your own personal flair to the game? If so, head to the Features tab and create your own players, customize the Stadium Beats to your liking, or even turn on and off certain songs from the soundtrack.

Franchise

Franchise mode is very similar to Season mode in terms of the control you have over the team, but now you are also given additional long-term control as a General Manager. Unlike in Season mode, you'll be piloting up to four teams through multiple seasons and doing so will require you to not only manage players on a day-to-day basis, but also deal with multi-year contracts, minor league development and scouting, and also the coaching staff. Additionally, you'll also receive periodic emails from everyone ranging from the owner of your ball club to crazed fans (who sometimes are indistinguishable). Be sure to flip ahead to the "Front Office" chapter of this book for detailed information on running a winning franchise.

GM Career

Each gameplay mode adds another element to the one before it and GM Career is no exception. Now, instead of taking the role of GM and Manager of a specific franchise, you actually create a General Manager and set out on a career. Your first step as a GM will be to sign a contract with one of the teams that have an opening. Here you'll have to balance your own monetary demands with the owner's personality and initial focus he has for you. As the new GM, the owner will expect you to complete certain short-term and long-term goals. Meeting these goals is the key to long-term success as a GM, both with your current franchise and ones you may work for down the road. Once you have signed on with a team, GM Career mode plays much like Franchise mode. The "Front Office" chapter in this guidebook will provide plenty of information on how to succeed at this difficult task.

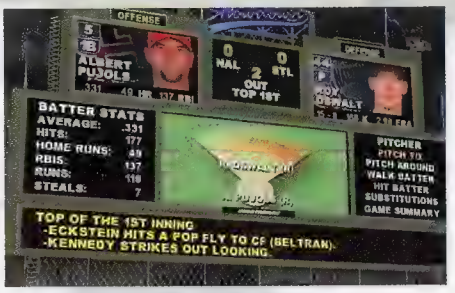


Home Run Derby

One of the most popular events during the All-Star break each year is the annual Home Run Derby. Fortunately, with Major League Baseball® 2K7 you needn't wait until the middle of summer to take a crack at becoming the next power hitting sensation! Home Run Derby mode allows you to play alone or head-to-head against a friend in a longball showdown. There are multiple scoring modes available, including one that grants extra points for calling your shot and hitting the ball into specified zones beyond the outfield wall.

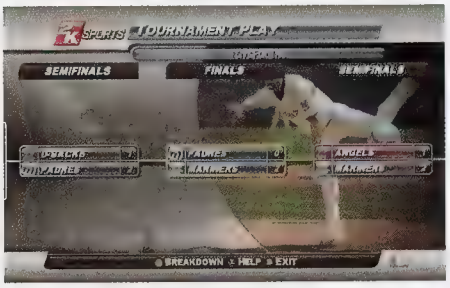
Manager Showdown

If you've ever found yourself wanting to simply give the orders to your players but not actually be responsible for pressing the buttons and actively playing the game, then this is the mode for you. Manager Showdown mode lets you play a text-based game of baseball. You direct your hitters on each at bat; you call for steals and make substitutions; and even direct the pitcher through all 27 outs of the game. Manager Showdown lets you quickly play through a game that can be every bit as mentally taxing as taking the field is physically.



Tournament

Tournament mode is the perfect party mode for group get-togethers. Here you can set up a bracket-based tournament with 2, 4, 8, or 16 teams and have each player (or CPU) take the role of a different team in a series of matches. The series length can be set to 1, 3, 5, or 7 games and the game will keep track of who plays who and when. Keep the tournament alive until an eventual winner is crowned!



Situation

Having trouble defending a particular situation in a game? Looking to experiment with certain defensive shifts at a particular time in a game? If so, this is the mode to test your strategy. Use the settings to set up any situation you can think of, then pick the teams, the pitchers, and make any lineup changes you desire. With that done, it's time to hit the field and join the game already in progress with the exact situation you dreamed up. Not only can you specify the inning, score, and number of baserunners, but even the spot in the lineup who is up next. This is a great tool that, if used properly, can really help you become a better player.

Advanced Baseball Tactics

You've mastered the basics, have a firm grip on the controls and have played a few games of Major League Baseball® 2K7 and now you want to dig deeper into the science of baseball. If this sounds like fun, you've come to the right spot! This chapter covers gameplay features and core concepts such as scouting reports, platooning, setting up the batter, defensive shifts, gameplay philosophies, and roster management.

Inside Edge

Regardless of the mode you decide to play, all single-player games of Major League Baseball® 2K7 feature scouting reports that can be bought via the "Inside Edge" scouting service. These scouting reports offer priceless information that is sure to help you gain an advantage over the competition. You can use this information to learn about a pitcher's tendencies or gain insight into the batter's hot and cold zones within the strike zone.

When playing an exhibition game, each team gets 350 "Edge Points" that can be used to acquire the Inside Edge on the opposing players. In most circumstances, this will be enough to purchase the report on the starting pitcher and one or two other players. It is recommended that you always buy the Inside Edge for the starting pitcher and the two best hitters on the opposing team. This is usually the batters in the third and fourth spot in the lineup. If you can't afford reports for the two best batters, then look to acquire the Inside Edge on the opposing team's closer.

If playing in Season, Franchise, or GM Career mode you must purchase the Inside Edge scouting reports by using team funds. This can be done via the Team Management screen. You can purchase Inside Edge scouting reports one at a time for individual players (at an average cost of $150,000 per report) or in bulk for an entire team (average cost of $3.2 million). The price changes from team to team and also depends on how soon you will be playing that team and whether or not they are a rival. Look ahead on your schedule to see which teams you'll be playing in the coming weeks and consider purchasing the scouting reports for them ahead of time.

Inside the Team Management screen, check out the Inside Edge section and scroll through the available information regarding each player for which you have purchased reports. Or, if you want to scan for info on the top players from each team, simply flip to the appendix at the rear of this book!

PITCHER REPORTS

Purchasing the Inside Edge scouting report for the opposing starting pitcher is an ideal investment, as you will likely face him for at least half of the game. And while having the reports for relief pitchers is also valuable, most relief pitchers only see an inning or two of action once every few days.

Having the report on a pitcher provides valuable insights into what he may be throwing next. For starters, three red flashing squares will appear in and around the strike zone, indicating the three areas the pitcher is most likely going to target with his next pitch. Use the Batter's Eye to focus on one of them and look for the ball in that area.

In addition to the probable pitch locations, you will see a listing of the percentages with which he throws each pitch type under the current strike count. Although the pitcher many not have a specific pitch that he throws more than 50% of the time, you can still use this information to your advantage by mentally grouping the types of pitches into two categories: fast and off-speed. The following table lists which pitches fall under what classification. Using combined percentages for similar pitches, you can know ahead of time, for example, that the pitcher might throw an off-speed pitch 73% of the time in a given situation. Now that's useful information!

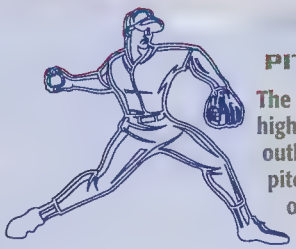
BATTER REPORTS

Owning the report on an opposing batter provides several unique advantages. For starters, your catcher will suggest a pitch type and set up in a location of the strike zone that is known to play to the batter's weaknesses. Look for the flashing pitch type and watch for the catcher to shift his glove toward the batter's cold zone. Double-check the direction of the pitch break and aim the Breakpoint so that the pitch hits the glove where the catcher positioned it. The catcher will adjust the glove's location and pitch suggestion as the strike count changes, so pay attention to what the catcher is asking for and see if over time you too can notice certain batter's tendencies during specific situations.

Another benefit to having the Inside Edge scouting report on an opposing hitter is that your defense will automatically shift to guard against that hitter's tendencies. Some batters hit the ball to a certain section of the field at a much higher frequency and your defense will move into position to defend against this.



PITCH SUGGESTIONS

The pitcher's suggested pitch will be highlighted either red or blue. If it's outlined in red, the catcher wants the pitcher to throw it for a strike; if it's outlined in blue, the pitcher should throw it for a ball--preferably just far enough outside the strike zone to get the batter to chase after it.

HOT AND COLD ZONES

The Inside Edge scouting reports also make the hot/cold zones of an opposing batter's strike zone visible. The red and blue squares show where the batter is strongest and weakest, respectively. Furthermore, the deeper the shade of color, the better or worse he is in that area of the strike zone. Some sections of the strike zone may appear white, which means that the batter is neither strong nor weak against pitches in that area.

Defensive Shifts

INFIELD ALIGNMENTS

There are times in the game when shifting the infield can mean the difference between getting the batter out or seeing the ball slip through to the outfield. Study the batter's spray charts via the Inside Edge scouting reports and shift your infield to defend against him. To do so, tap Down on the Directional Pad to bring up the Infield Shift screen, then tap Left or Right to cycle through the available alignments. The infield will shift back to their normal alignment after the at-bat.

- Normal: This is the standard infield alignment that is suitable for most situations.
- Middle In: Useful for protecting against a bunt thanks to the corner infielders lining up on the grass.
- Back: All infielders line up at the edge of the outfield grass to maximize the opportunity to keep the ball in the infield for a put-out at first base.
- Double Play: This is the ideal positioning to turn a double play when a runner is on first base.
- Guard Lines: Useful for batters who seldom hit the ball up the middle. Be sure to pitch either tight or away to play to this alignment.

- Bunt: Similar to Middle In, but the shortstop and second baseman aren't as spread out. Protects against sacrifice bunts.
- Horseshoe: For extreme left-handed pull hitters who have a career-long inability to drive the ball the other way.
- Protect Plate: It's late in the game and you're clinging to a one-run lead with a man on third. Everybody is in for the play at the plate! A very risky alignment, as fielders have very little time to react. Use sparingly!
- Double Play Corners In: Useful for turning a double play against a batter who likes to bunt.
- Normal Left: Shifts all fielders to the left for hitters with a slight tendency to pull the ball.
- In Left: The left side of the infield plays closer to gain extra time against a fast runner.
- Back Left: The batter tends to hit the ball to the left and you need to keep the ball in the infield for a put-out at first.
- Double Play Left: Use this shift against batters who hit grounders toward third base when a runner is on first.
- Normal Right: Shifts all fielders to the right for hitters with a slight tendency to hit in that direction.
- In Right: The right side of the infield plays closer to gain an advantage against a fast runner.
- Back Right: The batter tends to hit the ball to the right and you need to keep the ball in the infield for a put-out at first.
- Double Play Right: Use this shift against batters who hit grounders toward first base when a runner is on first.

OUTFIELD ALIGNMENTS

Similar to making changes to your infield alignment, there are times during a game when you will want to shift your outfielders. Study the batter's spray charts via the Inside Edge scouting reports and shift your outfield to defend against his tendencies. To do so, tap Up on the Directional Pad to bring up the Outfield Shift screen, then tap Left or Right to cycle through the available alignments. The outfield will shift back to their normal alignment after the at-bat.

- Normal: This is the default alignment useful for most situations.
- Shallow: Useful against a weak hitter or when it is essential to make a play at home plate.
- Deep: All outfielders take a few steps backward to guard against an extra base hit. You are willing to give up a single, but want to keep the runner from advancing any further.
- Left: For batters who regularly hit the ball to left field.
- Right: For batters who regularly hit the ball to right field.
- Deep Left: Useful against power hitters who typically drive the ball to left field. Again, this will likely concede the base hit, but will help protect against a double and make robbing a home run more likely.
- Deep Right: Useful against power hitters who typically drive the ball to right field. Again, this will likely concede the base hit, but will help protect against a double and make robbing a home run more likely.
- Shallow Left: Used against non-power hitters who often hit the ball to left field. Use sparingly, as any ball that gets behind your outfielder will result in extra base hits.
- Shallow Right: Used against non-power hitters who often hit the ball to right field. Use sparingly, as any ball that gets behind your outfielder will result in extra base hits.

Platooning

The 25 player maximum that Major League Baseball® allows for each team gives managers the opportunity to keep several extra players on the roster. The manager can use these players late in the game as a reserve or at the beginning based upon the opposing starting pitcher and whether or not there is a designated hitter allowed. Oftentimes, there are several players on a team who can play the same position and deciding who to start and who to sit can be tricky. Here are a couple of tips for managing these "platoon" situations.

WHO IS THE STARTING PITCHER?

If you have two players who qualify for the same position and one is left-handed and the other is right-handed, you should start the player who matches up better against the opposing team's starting pitcher. As a rule of thumb, you will want to start a left-handed batter against a right-handed pitcher and vice-versa. If both players hit from the same side of the plate or are switch-hitters, then start the player who has the higher offensive output.

IS THE DESIGNATED HITTER RULE IN PLAY?

When playing in an American League ballpark, consider using the weaker defensive player as the designated hitter. If you already have a gifted designated hitter, then start the player who matches up best against the starting pitcher and use the other player as a reserve later in the game.

IS THERE A SECOND POSITION THE BATTER CAN PLAY?

There may be times when you simply don't want to keep a player out of your lineup. If there is a second position that he can play without sacrificing too much in the way of defense, then plug him into this other position. You always want to begin the game with your best offensive weapons in the starting lineup, as long as these players aren't a huge liability defensively. Two good places to consider making these substitutions are at first base and left field, as they typically are the least demanding positions defensively.

Setting Up the Batter

In real life, pitchers mix up their pitch selection and location in an effort to expand the strike zone (as it relates to the umpire's perception), to keep the batter guessing, and to make him uncomfortable and back him off the plate. For example, a pitcher may pound the inside of the strike zone with repeated fastballs to prevent the batter from leaning over the plate—there's something about a 90 mph fastball buzzing your chin that evokes your sense of self-preservation and causes you to back away. This in turn may make it difficult for the batter to connect with a subsequent pitch down and away.

In a videogame, however, the player is unlikely to experience any sort of fear, so this tactic is largely ineffective. That said, the pitcher can still set up the batter by effectively changing speeds and mixing up the location and degree of movement on pitches. One way to do this is to throw two fastballs in a row in varying locations, then follow them with an off-speed pitch (the opposite also works well). Just when the player is getting the timing of his button-pressing dialed in, you'll change the speed and have him swinging way out in front of the pitch (or late). Similarly, you can often blow a fastball right by the batter after throwing several breaking balls in a row.

Baseball Philosophy

Successful managers not only put their players in a position to excel, but he must also formulate a game plan that fits the collective strengths of the entire club. Sometimes this requires the manager to ignore his own personal beliefs and preferences with regards to playing style and, instead, instruct his team in a way that suits their makeup.

POWER BALL

Everybody loves the long ball; or so the saying goes. There's no denying the excitement that is generated—both in the seats and in the dugout—when a home run is hit. One swing, a jog around the bases, and the score has changed. Homeruns are a pitchers worst nightmare and can just as quickly erase a deficit as they can put a game out of reach.

Reliance on the homerun blossomed during the 1990s as top players took alternating cracks at topping long-standing records and teams assembled thunderous lineups comprised of burly ball crushers. The basic plan of attack when managing a team built on power is to get the first two runners on base without risking any outs with unnecessary steals or sacrifices. Then let the heart of the batting order swing for the fences with the hope of blasting a two- or three-run homerun. At the least, they'll drive the ball deep enough for a runner to tag-up. Teams built around the homerun often live and die by it. Oftentimes, they are as likely to score 10 runs in a game as they are to score just one or two.

The addition of the designated hitter in the American League adds an extra hitting specialist to the lineup (in place of the pitcher) and makes the allure of this style of play all the more enticing for AL managers. Although there are exceptions, not having to maintain a certain level of agility and endurance that is required by playing the field gives designated hitters the green light to bulk up and focus entirely on strength and power.

SMALL BALL

Just as some teams rely heavily on the homerun, there are others who build their lineups around speed, smart baserunning, and timely, purposeful hitting. The idea here is to not sit around and wait for a homerun to drive your runners in, but to instead use the outs you're given to manufacture runs. In theory, if the leadoff hitter can get on base, then there is little reason not to get him around to score by the end of the inning.

The textbook example of small ball requires the leadoff man during any inning getting on base. It's vital. But it's not truly enough to reach first, he needs to reach second (i.e. scoring position) either by hitting a double or by stealing second. With a runner on second base and no outs, it becomes very easy for the next batter to sacrifice bunt to move the runner down to third. With the runner on third and only one out, the next batter can hit a sacrifice fly to the outfield so the runner can tag-up and score, or hit the ball to the right side of the infield.

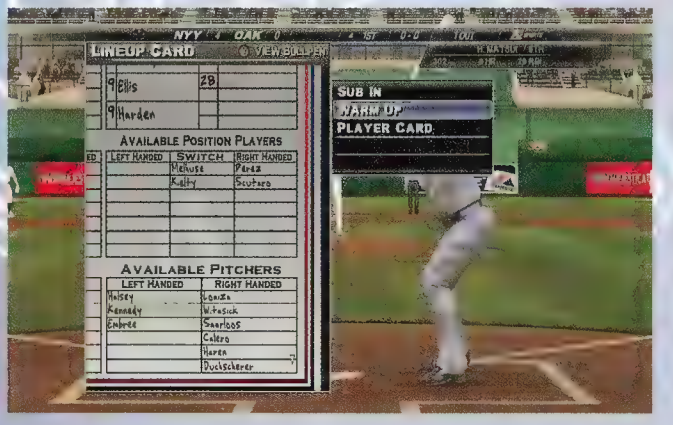
If the leadoff hitter isn't fast enough to steal second or tag-up, then the batters who follow him are forced to get base hits to move him over. This not only increases the chances of the batter striking out and burning one of the three outs, but there is the added risk of hitting into a double play. One way to minimize this risk is to employ the "hit-and-run." Instruct the runner on first to start running during the pitch delivery to get a head-start down to second. The batter will then try to drive the ball behind the runner into right field. If the batter misses the ball, the runner risks getting thrown out at second. However, as long as good contact is made, the early jump should give the baserunner enough time to get to third base or, at the very least, a chance to reach second without being doubled-up.

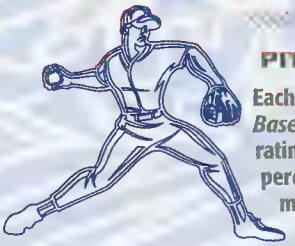
Roster Management

More than likely, the players you have taking the field at the start of the game will not be the same nine men you have finishing the game. For starters, very few pitchers have the stamina to pitch a complete game—the player stats in the "Major League Rosters" chapter prove this. Because of this not only will you have to make pitching changes throughout the latter half of the game, but you'll also want to make changes to your lineup as a result of the opposing team's pitching changes. Although it may seem like managers may make too many changes to the casual observer, there is definitely a method to their madness.

CALLS TO THE BULLPEN

When pitching, the longer you hold the pitch button to increase the Effectiveness Ring, the more stamina you drain from your pitcher. This holds true for fastballs as well as change-ups and breaking balls. Although you may think the pitcher isn't throwing as hard when throwing an off-speed pitch and should therefore maintain stamina, the effective effort is the same as with a fastball. Don't just think of stamina as it relates to how hard the pitcher is throwing but rather how effective he is being. Eventually, the pitcher's stamina rating will drop to a point that results in his breaking balls not moving as much, his fast balls losing their zip, and his change-ups not hitting their spots. When this happens, usually after the pitcher's stamina is down to 50%, you should begin warming up a relief pitcher in the bullpen.





PITCHER STAMINA RATINGS

Each of the pitchers in Major League Baseball® 2K7 has a different stamina rating. This impacts the number of percentage points their in-game stamina meter is reduced by following each pitch. Pitchers like Carlos Zambrano and Roy Halladay have extraordinary stamina and will only lose about 1% from their stamina rating after each pitch, no matter how much effort you put into the pitch. Other pitchers with lower stamina ratings may lose more than 3% from their stamina meter after each pitch. Naturally, as the game progresses and the pitcher begins to tire, these numbers may rise.

PITCHER ABUSE

It's the seventh inning, your pitcher is throwing a shutout and you want to him go the distance and record his first complete game of the season. Think twice before doing this! Although a pitcher may appear to be throwing well despite only having 10-20% of his stamina left, be warned that he will likely suffer an injury the longer you leave him out there! Let his stamina drop to 0% and that injury just might cost him to miss the rest of the season!

WARMING UP & COOLING OFF

As a rule of thumb, you should start warming up a relief pitcher at least two to three batters before you intend to call on him. As he warms up, his stamina and effectiveness will rise as will his resistance to injury. However, if you let him throw in the bullpen for too long, the excessive throwing will begin to wear on him and his stamina meter will begin to empty. If your team is at bat for a long time in your half of the inning, sit him down so he doesn't tire.

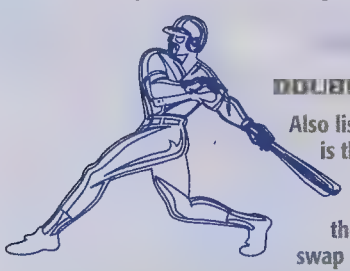
Making a pitching substitution is a two-step process. First, you must warm up a pitcher in the bullpen—you can't simply substitute a pitcher who is cold, as he will be even less effective than your tired pitcher. When warming up a pitcher, you must decide whether you need a long reliever, a middle reliever, a setup man, or the closer. This will depend on the situation you find yourself in. Consult the following table for advice.

THE BULLPEN

ROLE	DURATION	SITUATION
LONG RELIEF	> 2 INNINGS	INEFFECTIVE OR INJURED STARTING PITCHER.
MIDDLE RELIEF	1 OUT TO 2 INNINGS	SITUATIONAL MATCHUPS OR FATIGUED PITCHER.
SETUP	1 INNING	TEAM HAS THE LEAD, NEEDS A BRIDGE TO THE CLOSER.
CLOSER	1 INNING OR LESS	TEAM LEADING IN A CLOSE GAME IN THE 9TH INNING.

Once you acknowledge the situation and decide on the type of pitcher you want, it's time to decide between a right-handed pitcher or a lefty. Before choosing at random, look at the lineup card for the opposing team and see which batters are due up in the next inning. If the other team is about to send up a string of predominantly right-handed hitters, then it's time to warm up a right-handed pitcher. On the other hand, if an imposing left-handed power hitter is due up, you should consider warming up a lefty instead. Not only does this tilt the advantage in your team's favor, but it also increases the likelihood of the other team's manager pinch hitting for one of their star sluggers.

Also, if it is late in the game and the score is close, you may want to bring in a middle relief pitcher to act as a specialist just to get a particular batter out. For example, if you're playing as the Yankees in a tight game in the 8th inning with the Red Sox, you may want to substitute left-handed specialist Mike Myers just to pitch to David Ortiz who hits right-handed pitching very well. This scenario plays out in ballparks across the league all the time.



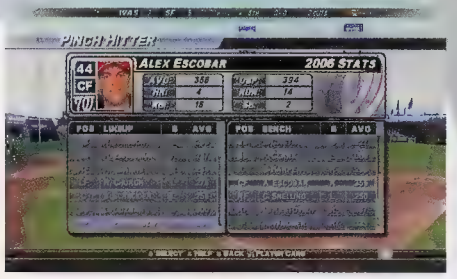
DOUBLE SWITCH

Also listed under the Substitutions menu is the option to perform what is known as a "double switch." More common in the National League, the double switch enables you to swap out a pitcher and a fielder at the same time so as to reshuffle the batting order. This is useful when a tired pitcher is due up to bat in the coming inning and you want to buy an inning or two without making your pitcher bat.

The double switch involves picking a fielder to be replaced in the lineup by a relief pitcher. Make this decision based upon who you have available on the bench and where you are in the batting order. Then you will substitute out the current pitcher for a fielder to replace the one you removed.

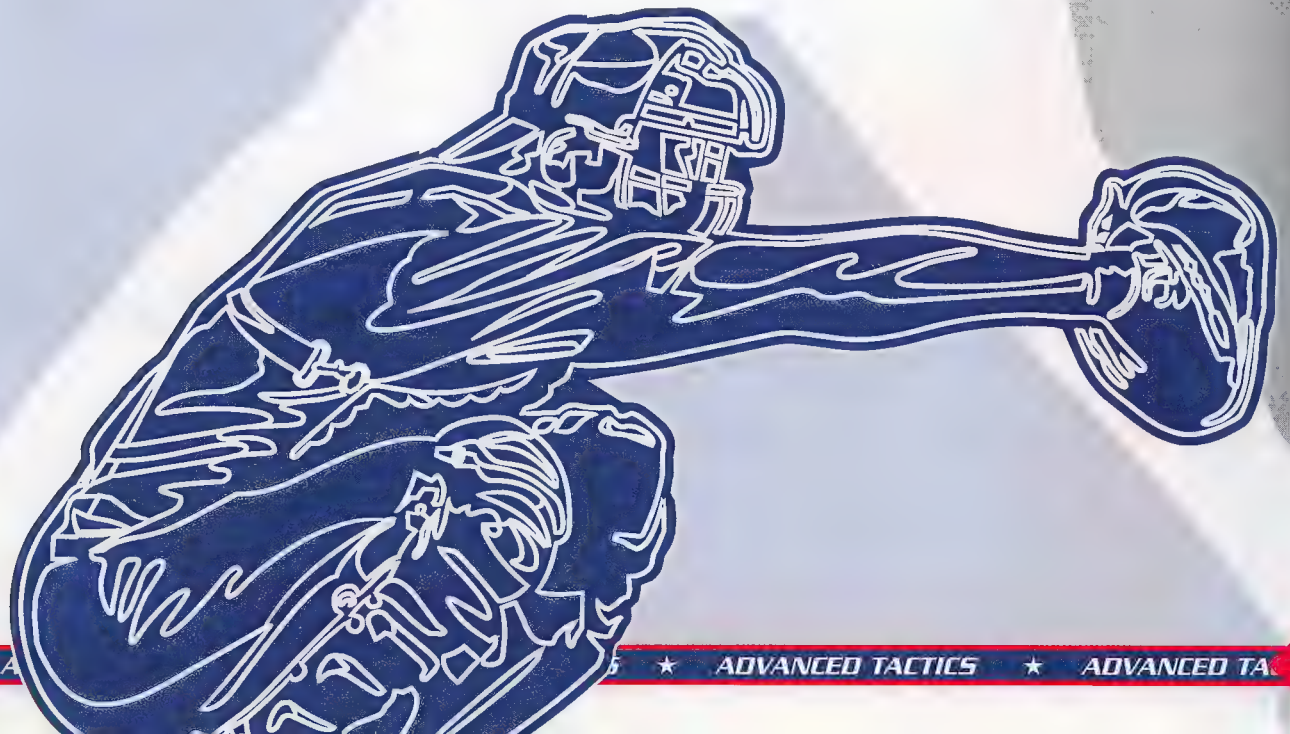
PINCH HITTING

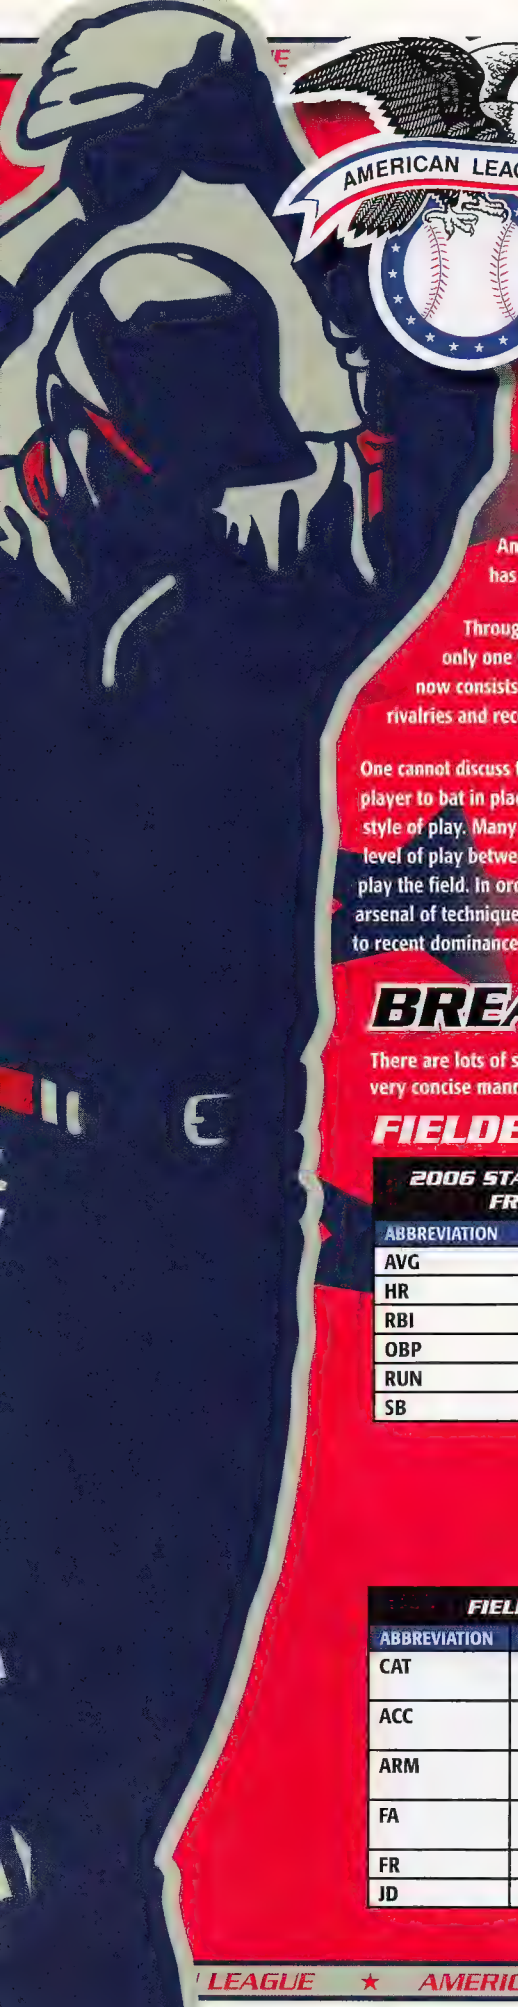
Pinch hitting is the act of substituting a batter to gain a favorable matchup versus a specific pitcher or to simply replace an ineffective batter. The most common instance of pinch hitting is to replace the pitcher in National League games. Additionally, batters who were held out of the starting lineup based upon the opposing team's starting pitcher may prove invaluable later in the game when relief pitchers take over. Pinch hitting is most commonly practiced late in close games when a timely hit can spell the difference between winning and losing. Use this option to replace a struggling batter, to shake up the lineup, or to possibly force a pitching change by the other team.



PINCH RUNNING

There will be times when one run late in the game is all it takes to turn a loss into a win. It's times like these when you want your fastest guys on the base paths. However, you don't want to lose the hitting ability of your better batters—after all, the speed will be of no use if they can't get on base! So, instead of pinch hitting, it's a good idea to let the batter get on base, then pinch run for him with a speedster. This practice is especially common in American League games when designated hitters, who are typically slower, get on base but lack the speed to help manufacture a run.





AMERICAN LEAGUE

The American League was created from a group of Great Lakes area teams known as the Western League in 1899. Then president of the league, Bancroft Johnson sought to challenge the entrenched National League and chose the turn of the century to make his move. Not coincidentally, the National League was in the process of contracting from twelve teams to eight. Although the American League, also known today as the "junior circuit", wasn't considered a full-blown Major League until 1901, it has gone on to post a World Series record of 60-42 over the National League.

Through the years, the American League has seen its share of teams come and go. Of the original eight franchises, the only one to not undergo a name change or relocation in the following century was the Detroit Tigers. The American League now consists of fourteen teams stretching geographically from Seattle to Tampa Bay and is home to some of the most heated rivalries and recognizable sporting franchises in the world, most notably the New York Yankees.

One cannot discuss the American League without mentioning its famous–and oft-criticized–DH Rule. This rule allows teams to designate a tenth player to bat in place of the pitcher, hence the term designated hitter. The DH Rule was implemented in 1973 and has given rise to a different style of play. Many experts today consider the American League's DH Rule to be at the root of what at times seems to be a disparity in the level of play between the two leagues. The American League's DH Rule has created a reprieve for aging power hitters who lack the speed to play the field. In order to contend with the abundance of power hitters, American League pitchers have been forced to develop an impressive arsenal of techniques and skills to keep the batters guessing. The superior pitching and power hitting abilities of the American League has led to recent dominance over the National League in the All-Star Game and, albeit to a lesser extent, the World Series.

BREAKING THINGS DOWN

There are lots of statistical ratings in this game. As you'll see in the following section, each player's statistics are listed in a very concise manner. For ease of use, we've listed all of the abbreviations and what they mean.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

The National League is not only the more senior of the two circuits in Major League Baseball, but it is actually the world's oldest professional sports league. The league was founded by William Hulbert of Chicago in 1876 as a replacement for the National Association of Professional Base Ball Players. Although having a 25-year head start over the American League, the National League has only won 42 of the 102 World Series played between the two.

The National League began with just eight franchises and has grown over the following 120 years to boast no less than 16 professional clubs. Despite the success of the league, not one of the original eight clubs still remains in either the present location or with their original name. And contrary to popular belief, the early Chicago White Stockings did not become the Chicago White Sox, but actually became the Chicago Cubs. The Midwestern roots of the league can still be felt to this day, as some of the most heated rivalries in the sport take place in the nation's bread-basket, most notably the rivalry between the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

The National League is not only older and boasts more teams than the American League, but its rules yield a slightly different style of play. The lack of a Designated Hitter in the National League not only places less emphasis on power hitting, but the requirement for pitchers to bat and for all batters to play the field yields a more youthful collection of players. Whether by coincidence or not, the younger and speedier players tend to thrive in the National League as managers rely more on the fundamentals of base running and stealing than their American League counterparts. There are exceptions, naturally, but many of the teams in the National League have honed their abilities and rosters to succeed in what many refer to as "small ball." The home run is always a welcome sight, but there's definitely something to be said for stolen bases and squeeze plays, both of which are in greater abundance in the National League.

BREAKING THINGS DOWN

There are lots of statistical ratings in this game. As you'll see in the following section, each player's statistics are listed in a very concise manner. For ease of use, we've listed all of the abbreviations and what they mean.

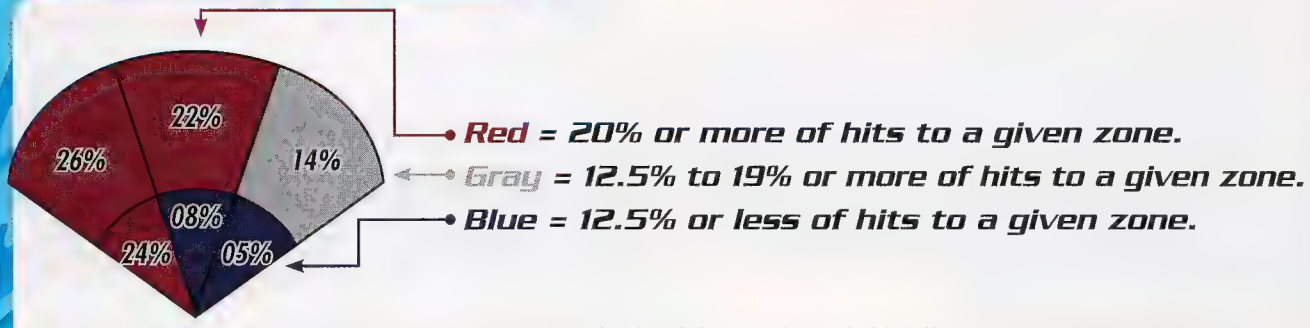
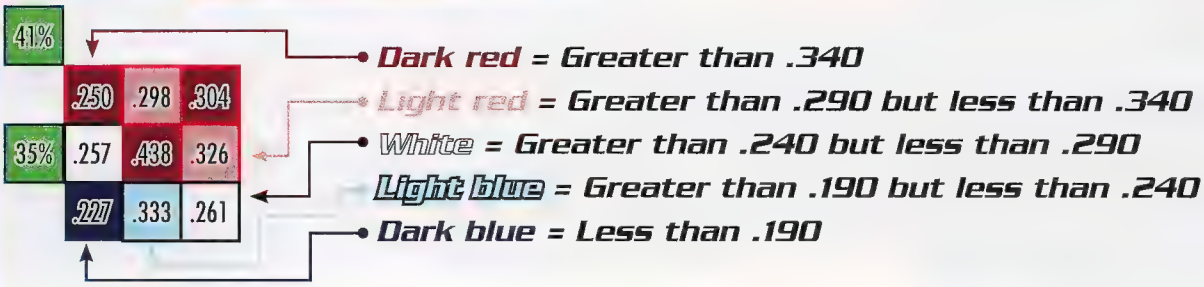
INSIDE EDGE

The statistical information provided in this section came directly from the fine folks at Inside Edge. It is included to provide a closer look at certain high-profile players on each team. Two players from each team are listed, along with their respective "spray zones," their "hit zones," and their batting average against specific pitches.



22%
26%
14%
08%
24%
05%
Red = 20% or more of hits to a given zone.
Gray = 12.5% to 19% or more of hits to a given zone.
Blue = 12.5% or less of hits to a given zone.

The "spray zone" is divided into six zones, three in the infield and three in the outfield. Different colors are applied to those section based on the number of balls hit everywhere, as shown below.



The "hot and cold zone" illustrates each player's batting average based upon 17 different "hit" zones (there are nine zones within the strike zone, and eight sections outside of the strike zone). The "hit" zone graphic is shown from the pitcher's viewpoint.

The "hot and cold zone" also illustrates each player's power hitting zones, which are only based upon the nine hitting zones. Any area highlighted with a red border indicates a slugging percentage greater than .450.

The eight zones outside the strike zone are considered "chase zones." A chase zone is colored green if a player swings at a pitch in that given zone more than 33.3% of the time.

The table at the bottom of each player's section shows their batting versus a certain type of pitch. Note that the pitches are grouped into one of five generic categories: Fastballs (4-seam fastball, 2-seam fastball, sinker, cut fastball); Curveballs (curveball, power curve, 12-6 curve, slurve, knuckle-curve); Sliders (sliders); Changeups (changeup, circle change, palmball).

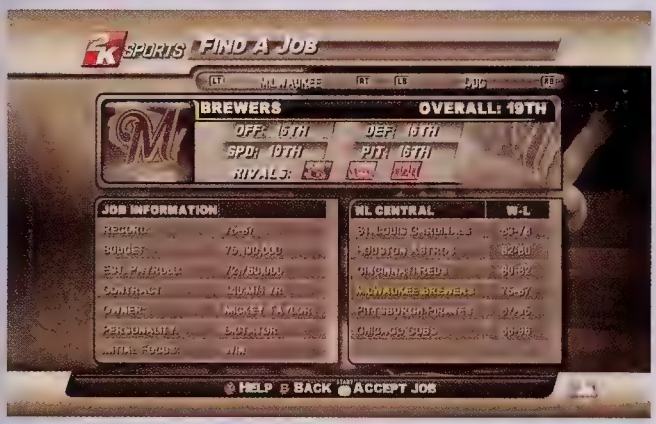
The Front Office

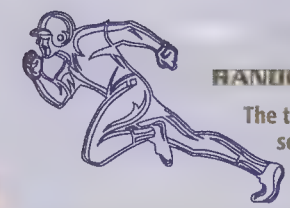
So you want to try your hand at running a Major League franchise? If so, then you've come to the right place. This chapter is your companion to Season, Franchise, and GM Career modes. This section will provide you with the necessary tips and strategies for navigating the many challenges encountered over the course of a baseball season. Note that this is not a step-by-step guide to walk you through an entire season, as every season is unique and unlikely to be replicated.

Your First Job

So you've decided to become a General Manager; your first task is to select a team. When picking a team to sign on with, it's important to look at three fundamental factors:



1. Compare the team's performance in the previous season with the initial focus as set by the owner. Some owners want to win, some want to make money, and others want to improve the team. These expectations may not always be reasonable.
2. Subtract the estimated payroll from the budget to determine how much money you have to play with and see if that marries well with the initial focus of the owner. Improving a team, for example, costs a lot of money and if you're a last-place team that suffers from poor attendance than this task could be difficult.
3. Consider the personality of the owner and how difficult it may be to work for a Maverick, Dictator, Investor, or Fan.



RANDOM OWNERS

The team owners listed in the "Find a Job" screen are randomly selected each time you begin a new GM Career. Not only are their names different, but so is their initial focus for the team and their personality. If you have your heart set on a particular team, then consider quitting the GM Career mode and starting over repeatedly until you find a match that you desire.

GM TASKS

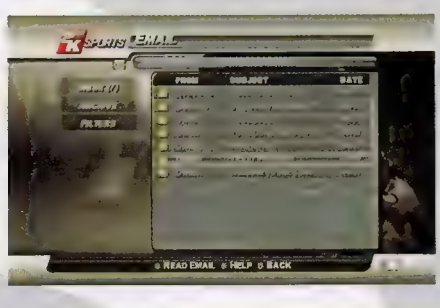
Upon accepting a job, your new owner will assign a series of tasks to complete. Many will need to be accomplished in the coming season, while others may stretch throughout your contract. These tasks are typically related to budget constraints, personnel, and on-the-field success. They will test your ability to improve the team's performance, stay within a given spending limit, and creatively navigate the trade waters to secure talent while offloading overpaid, underperforming members of your own club.

Completing these tasks leads to a happy owner, which in turn should make you happy. Upon completion of a task, you will gain an increase in your budget for the following season, an increase in your GM reputation and GM score. The higher your GM reputation and GM score, the more money you will be able to command further down the road in your career.

Daily Responsibilities

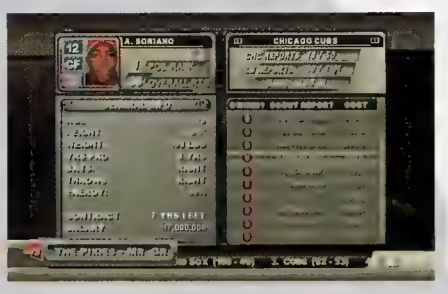
CHECKING EMAIL

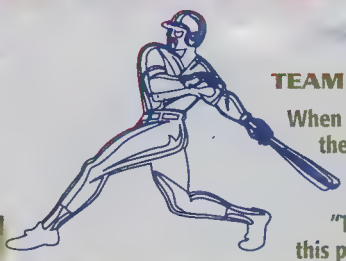
Your team's owner, other managers, the good folks from Inside Edge scouting service, and even crazed fans will contact you regularly through email. It's important to keep on top of your incoming email and read it regularly. It not only provides insight into the expectations of your owner, but it also avails you to upcoming sales at Inside Edge and potential trade offers from other clubs. You will likely get new email each day, so always advance the calendar if you're expecting news about a bonus or a potential trade offer!



INSIDE EDGE

One of the biggest responsibilities placed on the GM during the season is to regularly provide his players with the best information available concerning their opponents. You can purchase this information from the Inside Edge scouting service. Scouting reports are available for any member of an opposing team individually or in groups, all batters, all pitchers, or team stars. Keep in mind that the price for these scouting reports fluctuates all the time. In general, scouting reports for teams you are playing in the near future will cost more than teams you are playing later in the season.





TEAM STARS ARE A BARGAIN

When shopping at Inside Edge early in the season (before your budget has swelled from ticket sales), it's best to limit your spending to the "Team Stars" bundle. Not only will this provide the Inside Edge scouting reports for the best four to six players on a given team regardless of position, but at a savings of $10,000 to $50,000 per player.

Depending on your team's finances, it may be impossible to afford many scouting reports early in the season. That's fine, as the baseball season is very long. Use money from the ticket sales in April to gradually begin purchasing scouting reports for divisional rivals starting in late May when talk of the playoffs heats up. Start with their main stars and build a collection over time. If you are still having trouble staying under your owner's spending limit, then only purchase scouting reports for teams with winning records or for whom you expect to play in the playoffs.

TICKET PRICES

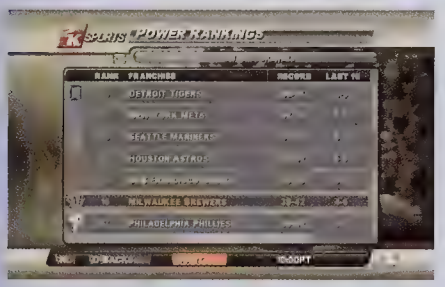
The sales of tickets to home games represents your primary source of income—money that is to be spent on personnel, scouting reports, and staff. Ticket prices can be set anywhere between $1.00 and $38.00 and, if you desire, can be adjusted daily in $0.10 increments.

The basic rules of supply and demand impact your ability to sell tickets. If your team is winning and there is a high fan buzz, then you can get away with charging more for tickets. Additionally, games played against a rival or a highly prestigious team (i.e. the Yankees, Red Sox, Dodgers, or Cubs) will also help fill the seats and increase demand. On the other hand, one of the best ways to boost lackluster attendance is to lower ticket prices.

Baseball fans can be a fickle lot. Remember to check your fan buzz index, attendance figures, and projected profit figures at least once every few days to see if you are managing your ticket prices effectively. If your profits and attendance are down, then you have no choice but to lower the ticket price. However, if your team is leading in the standings and about to host a rival, then go ahead and raise those fees! Your fans might not like it, but they'll come anyway.

MONITOR TEAM PERFORMANCE

One of the best ways to know if you can raise ticket prices soon is if your team is ahead in the standings and/or rising through the Power Rankings. Check on the status of the team as well as individual team leaders to see how they are stacking up against the best of the best. If your players get hot, the team will get hot and the fans will come in droves.

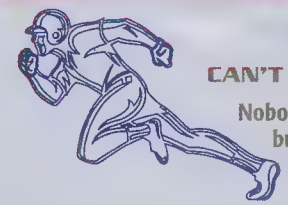


You can also quickly and easily identify hot and cold hitters on your team by cycling through the info panes on the main screen. Your players will be highlighted in yellow; keep an eye on them and consider roster adjustments when applicable.

TEAM PULSE

Players' ratings are directly impacted by their morale. Visit the Team Pulse section under the Manage tab to inspect the happiness of your players. Players who are happy can receive up to a +5 boost to each of his ratings. As a manager, coaxing this rating boost out of your players is a primary goal. To achieve this requires that players be satisfied with their salary, playing time, position in the lineup, the team's performance, and their own personal performance of late. Some of this is outside the manager's control, however, players who are dissatisfied with playing time or their position in the lineup may change their tune with a quick roster change. Obviously, bench players aren't as likely to have a high morale rating as the starters, but if you have a bench player who is enjoying a recent hot streak, get him in the lineup. Not only will your team benefit from the move, but his morale will improve as will his ratings.

The manager and GM also have several other things they can do to increase player morale. For example, select a disgruntled player and consider naming him a team captain. This is an easy way to accommodate an unhappy, yet quality player. Other options include trading him, releasing him, or re-signing him to a larger contract. However, before heading down any of these paths, it's important to read his comments on the Team Pulse screen to see what it is he's upset about. Also, focus your efforts in this area on your team's starters and avoid spending too much time and energy (and team resources) on players who simply aren't that good.



CAN'T PLEASE EVERYONE

Nobody wants to see their players unhappy, but it's simply a fact of life that you can't possibly make all 25 members of your team happy at all times. Attempting to do so will either cost your team a fortune or disrupt the balance in the clubhouse, possibly creating more friction in the process. Focus your efforts in player morale on your top three starting pitchers, your top five batters/fielders, and your closer. And remember, winning fixes everything!

TEAM MEETINGS

Looking to get a slight morale boost across your entire team? If so, call a team meeting and let the manager speak to the entire club. There are a lot of approaches a manager can take and how the players react to each is anyone's guess. Take into consideration the manager's prestige and motivation ratings, as well as his style (aggressive or passive) and think about how players may react to the approach. Meeting themes range from talking about the importance of playing hard to taking the time to chew them out… or worse!

Roster Management

A big part of a GM's day is spent making sure that the players they are sending onto the field each day are the best available. In addition to meeting your personal tasks set forth by the owner, you must constantly look to upgrade your team via trades, free agency, or perhaps your minor league system. In the quest to find new talent, don't overlook players on your bench who may be deserving of more playing time. Use the Manage tab to make adjustments to your lineups, pitching rotation, and depth charts based on recent player stats so that you always capitalize on your players hot streaks.

FREE AGENCY

The easiest way to add a spark to your team is to acquire a talented free agent. Not only does this allow you to keep all of your current players, but you don't run the risk of benefiting your opposition. Look to the GM tab and select "Free Agents" to see the current crop of free agents. Sort the free agents by position and select a player whose age and overall rating suits your fancy. Once selected, it's time to negotiate a contract. The player will let you know up front what his demands are (often based on his ability to get along with your manager's style) and it's up to you to make him an offer.

If you are comfortable matching the player's initial offer, then go for it, as you will all but guarantee high player morale when he joins your club. If you think he's asking for too much money, you can offer a lower annual salary but you will likely need to increase the duration of the contract by one or two years. Similarly, if you don't want to sign him to a long contract, you can often get the player to agree to a shorter duration as long as you offer more money per year. Negotiations are a constant give and take with the player wanting income security. That security can come from either a long contract or a large salary, but only grant the best players in the sport both.

TRADES

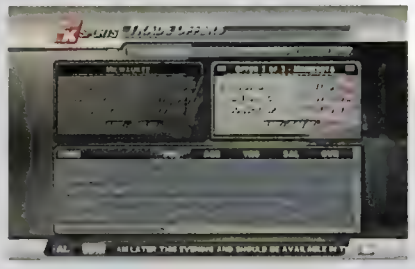
GMs make trades to better their team and reduce the payroll. When heading to the "Trade Central" section of the GM tab, you must know what your goal is ahead of time. Are you looking to cut salary, make an immediate improvement to the team, or are you simply looking to meet a task set forth by the team owner?

There are three ways to do this: Trade Finder, Manual Trade, and Player Finder. Regardless of your goal, each option can get the job done.

TRADE FINDER

Trade Finder gives you the option to search the trade market based on whether you desire to offer up players (dump salary) or if you're looking to acquire players (improve team). Both choices work the same in that you must select up to three specific players and positions that you either need or are willing to part with. When making a trade, it's always a good idea to try to offload a high-priced player who is underperforming while working to improve the position that is currently ranked lowest on your team.

Once you come up with a combination of offers and requests that generate interest from other teams, you need to look at the players the other team is offering. How good are they and how do they fit the needs of your team? Secondly, you want to see the comparative salaries. Regardless of whether or not you are actively looking to decrease the team's payroll, you should always aim to get the most on-the-field production for the lowest price. Sum up the total salaries of the players you are offering and the ones the other team has on the table and see if what you are getting costs less than the players you are sending away; if so, that's a good thing.



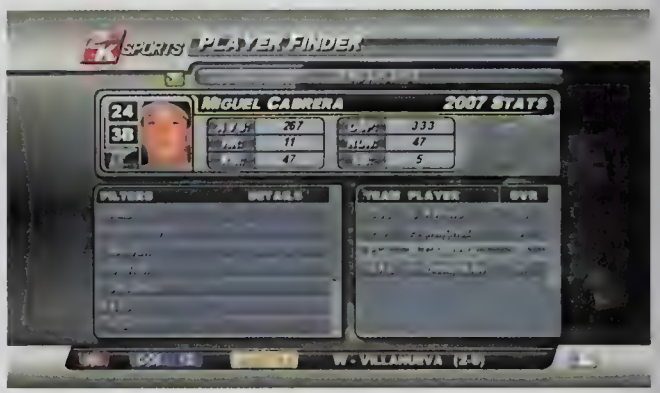
Not all teams that make an offer are 100% interested in seeing that trade come to fruition and even if they are, they may be willing to agree to a trade that benefits you even more. Select one of the players they are offering and substitute it with a player from their roster that you covet even more. That team's interest in the trade change will be reflected in the meter immediately. Although you aren't likely to get them to agree to a trade in which they have less than 70% interest, it doesn't hurt to try. This is especially true since they will not pull the original offer off the table no matter how many times you unsuccessfully counter-offer.

MANUAL TRADE

Manual Trade is for those times when you have a very specific trade in mind and are not looking to field offers from across the league. Select the player(s) who you wish to offer in the trade, then select a team and player who you want in return. As with Trade Finder, the opposing team's level of interest in the trade is shown immediately. You can continue tweaking the offering until they agree or you give up and look for a new trade partner.

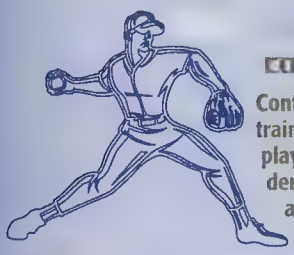
PLAYER FINDER

Player Finder is arguably the best way to find an available substitute for an injured starter. This mechanism essentially enables a team to place a wanted ad with the rest of the league. For example, if David Wright of the Mets suffered a serious injury and was sidelined for 60 days, the GM of the Mets could use Player Finder to place a request for a right-handed third baseman. Not only that, but Player Finder makes it possible to specify age, experience, salary, overall rating, and a lot more. Once the list of potential matches comes back, it's up to you to make the trade happen.



Player Development

For those looking to play multiple seasons, developing the talent of your franchise--both on the big league roster and in your minor league farm system--is of vital importance. Player development, as you may have guessed, is done through proper coaching. As the GM, you make all hiring and firing decisions with regards to the coaching staff but you also determine what they focus their coaching on.



COACH NEGOTIATIONS

Contract negotiations with coaches and trainers are done in the same manner as players. Coaches will make specific contract demands based on their experience and also their desire to work under your team's manager.

Each team has coaches for pitching, hitting, baserunning, fielding, a scout, and a trainer. A smart GM will have his staff play to the strengths of the coaches' abilities. For example, if a hitting coach excels at power but shows a low grade for contact, then you should make him spend more time coaching power, which he obviously knows a lot about. The more time the coaches spend instructing from their own personal strengths, the faster the players' ratings in those areas will increase. This applies to each coach and his specific tasks.

No matter how good you believe your coaches are, you can't expect to see rapid improvement in your players overnight. That said, check out the "Player Development" screen listed under the Staff menu at least once every month to make sure that some level of improvement is occurring. Scroll through your roster on this screen to see which categories they are improving upon. Don't let your team get too lopsided though, as a one-dimensional team is all but certain to lose in the end.

KEEP COACHING CONTRACTS SHORT

Many coaches only have one or two particular strengths. If left to continue coaching your team for multiple seasons, these coaches can cause a negative impact on the overall talent of your players. Try to keep coaches to a 1- or 2-year contract and replace them with coaches whose strengths counter the weaknesses of their predecessors. This will result in a balanced team over the long term.

CHALLENGES, UNLOCKABLES, & ACHIEVEMENTS

Challenges

Major League Baseball® 2K7 features an in-depth challenge system that rewards the player with tokens for completing specific tasks while playing the game. You can use these tokens to purchase jerseys, gameplay cheats, uniforms, and even classic teams in the "My Skybox" section of the game. The list of available challenges are listed in the Skybox, as well as under the "My 2K7" option on the main menu.

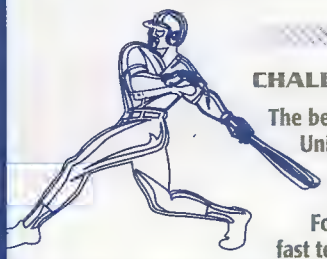
UNIVERSAL CHALLENGES

Unlike Gameday Challenges, you can complete these particular challenges at any time in any game mode. Note that these challenges are not impacted by what the opposing team does. There are five levels of Universal Challenges, ranging from 1 = easy to 5 = very difficult. Completing challenges that rank on the higher level naturally awards more tokens, but so does playing on a high difficulty setting. There are a total of 96 different Universal Challenges. The following tables show the number of tokens awarded for completing each challenge per difficulty level.



CHALLENGE MASTER

The best way to complete a lot of Universal Challenges is to try and rack up as many stats as possible in one particular area of the game. For instance, if you're playing as a fast team, try to steal as many bases as possible to complete as many stolen base challenges as possible.

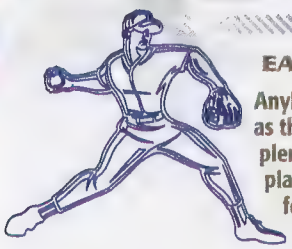
SEASONAL CHALLENGES

You can only complete these challenges by playing in the Season, Franchise, or GM Career gameplay modes. Many of these challenges consist of season-long statistical requirements. Fortunately, the same assortment of Seasonal Challenges has been scaled to meet the length and difficulty of each available season duration. You'll earn more tokens for completing Seasonal Challenges during a longer season than a shorter one. That said, you don't have to play every game in a season. Go ahead and simulate as many as you want and know that you'll still earn plenty of tokens!



EARN WHAT YOU SPEND

Anybody can simulate an entire season as the Yankees or Cardinals and rack up plenty of tokens, but what fun is that? Try playing through a real season and select a few players, such as a starting pitcher, a leadoff hitter, a power hitter and a closer, and actively try to win each of them a skills trophy or, possibly, even the Cy Young or League MVP award! Accomplish this feat and you're sure to earn plenty of tokens!

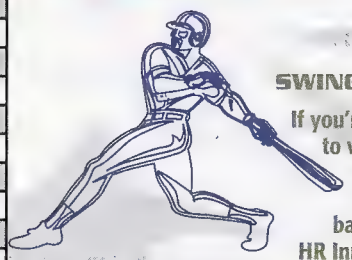
TRIVIA CHALLENGES

The camera will pan to the scoreboard at the end of the third inning in each game. Don't "button through" the break, as you'll miss a chance to win some tokens via the game's Trivia Challenge. One Fact or Fiction, Multiple Choice, or Triple Play trivia question will be given about the home team. There are over 1200 Trivia Challenges (that's over 40 questions per team!) and a correct answer is always worth 10 tokens.

HR INNING CHALLENGES

AWARD	PROBABILITY
10 TOKENS	22% CHANCE
20 TOKENS	18% CHANCE
30 TOKENS	16% CHANCE
40 TOKENS	12% CHANCE
50 TOKENS	10% CHANCE
60 TOKENS	8% CHANCE
70 TOKENS	6% CHANCE
80 TOKENS	4% CHANCE
100 TOKENS	3% CHANCE
150 TOKENS	1% CHANCE

A specific inning will be selected at random in each game to be the HR Inning. This inning will be between the 2nd and 8th innings of the game and award a random number of tokens for every homerun slugged during that inning. The number of tokens awarded is based upon the following table's probabilities.



SWING AWAY

If you're feeling confident in your ability to win the game and don't mind risking an inning's worth of potential productivity, have every batter who comes to the plate in the HR Inning try to go yard.

Unlockables

Enter the My Skybox area and head up the stairs to the three bookshelves lined with unlockable items. This is where you can spend the tokens you earn from the challenges to unlock special teams, jerseys, gameplay cheats and more. There are 66 total unlockables to collect!

X360 Achievements

The Xbox 360 version of Major League Baseball® 2K7 includes 33 Achievements worth a total of 1000 Gamer Points. You can unlock the majority of these Achievements while playing in Exhibition, Season, Franchise, GM Career or online over Xbox Live. Although some of the Achievements require that you play on a specific difficulty setting, the majority of these Achievements can be accomplished using adjusted rosters.

If you want to unlock as many Achievements as possible—and have no shame—enter the Player Edit screens while browsing the roster of the team you want to play as and maximize all of your players' stats. Similarly, select a desired opponent and lower all of their players' stats. It won't take many games to unlock many of the single-game Achievements in this manner. Also, for those who simply must unlock every Achievement as fast as possible, you can use the tokens you earn to purchase the gameplay cheats and make it even easier to unlock the Achievements. But where's the fun in that?

Author Acknowledgements

I feel really fortunate to have gotten the opportunity to write the guidebook for what, in my opinion, is the best videogame rendition of the sport of baseball yet made. And for that opportunity I want to thank Leigh Davis, David Waybright, and Mike Degler of BradyGames. I also want to express my deep gratitude to Tim Cox, my editor on the project, for his enthusiastic support and encouragement. It's always a pleasure to work with you. This strategy guide is a lot more than just my text and screenshots, however. Without the hard work of the book's designers, [insert name], it wouldn't be half the guidebook it is. Thanks a lot! Of course, that also goes for Take-Two, Topps, and Inside Edge whose contributions to this strategy guide can't be overstated. Lastly, I want to thank my friend Brian Donahue whose willingness to fly across the country to spend a few days helping me understand the finer elements of baseall is greatly appreciated. Go Mariners!
